SIMON COWELL AND HIS FUR-TOGENIC PETS POSE FOR GUIDE DOGS' 90TH

He has worked with Hollywood stars including George Clooney, and for photographer Andy Gott's latest assignment he recruited some very familiar faces — along with their famous owners. To help launch Guide Dogs' annual appeal and to celebrate the charity's 90th anniversary, Andy photographed stars including Simon Cowell, David Walliams and Estelle, asking them to pose next to their faithful friends.

Naturally it wasn't "yes" from talent show judge Simon, who makes no bones about his love of dogs — especially his own, mostly cross Squidly, Dobby, Freddy and Daisy (all above). "Dogs will give up their lives for you," he once explained. "They put their lives in front of your kids. I've seen it with my dogs and my dogs are dogs."

Stars pose with pets to celebrate charity turning 90

Celebrities are not known for their willingness to share the limelight, but a host of household names have made an exception for their most loyal fans

(Sam Tobin writes).

Dozens of A-listers including Simon Cowell, David Walliams, Tilda Swinton and Fiona Bruce, have posed with their pets to celebrate the 90th anniversary of Guide Dogs. Walliams, who was pictured with his border terriers Bert and Ernie, said: "My dogs mean everything to me so I can only imagine the incredible bond a person has with their guide dog."

The charity is encouraging supporters to raise money to fund life-changing services for people with sight loss with "90-themed" fundraisers such as a 90s party, walking 90km or baking 90 cakes.

Gotts include Martin Clunes, with his cocker spaniel called Bob Jackson, Imelda Staunton and Jim Carter with their rescue dog Molly and Dion Dublin, the former footballer who rescued a stray from a dual carriageway three years ago, with his bullmastiff Maggie.

The UK's first guide dog partnership qualified in October 1931 and Guide Dogs is now responsible at any one time for 8,400 puppies and dogs.

Pam White, the national community fundraising campaigns manager, said: "As we've grown, so have our services, provided by brilliant and dedicated people working alongside our fantastic dogs."

"Sight loss isn't going away. But neither are we. We plan to double the amount of people we help by 2023, helping them to help people with sight loss live actively, live independently and live well."

JIM Carter and wife Imelda Staunton get to star in their favourite sort of scene with their beloved rescue dog Molly.

The couple were among several celebrities who took part in photoshoots to raise awareness of the 90th anniversary of Guide Dogs.

Photographer Andy Gotts also snapped Martin Clunes with pet Bob Jackson, his mum Heidi, Jim and Penny.

Simon Cowell's Squiddly, Diddy, Freddy and Daisy lapped up the attention, while Sir Derek Jacobi had a big cuddle with Daisy.

And Eamonn Holmes revealed Ruth Langford isn't his only love as he posed with rescued Maggie.

It is hoped people will be inspired to hold fundraisers based on the number 90. Spokeswoman Pam White said: "Sight loss isn't going away. But neither are we."

Dr MAX THE MIND DOCTOR

Let NHS psychiatrist Max Pemberton transform your life

The best therapists come with a lead and waggy tail

DOGS really do deserve their title of man's best friend, don't they? Where would we be without our faithful hounds? A host of celebrities, including Simon Cowell, Tilda Swinton, Eamonn Holmes and David Williams, have been photographed with their dogs in a series to celebrate Guide Dogs' 90th anniversary this week. Looking at the photos, it really brings home how integral canines are to our lives.

Of course, it's not just guide dogs that help people — I'm a great believer in the power of all pooches to help, especially when it comes to mental health.

I know, if you're a cat person you're probably spicing feathers at this suggestion, but bear me out. While a cat can be a wonderful companion, there's always a sense they are only around for as long as the tin of Whiskers is available. Take away the whiskers and the food, and they will scatter off somewhere else.

One person who, ironically, isn't a cat person is Andrew Lloyd Webber who said last week he was left so 'emotionally damaged' by the film version of his hit Cats (someone who has seen it will know why) that he had to buy a 'therapy dog' to help him overcome his mental struggles.

THE fact is, dogs are often better than any pill or potion for cheering people up. Life can be difficult for all of us at times, but one of the things that is almost guaranteed to lift your spirits — and, unlike most of the medications we dish out, has no side-effects — comes with a collar, a lead and a wagging tail.

Time and time again I've seen dogs transform lives and help people get through even the darkest, most difficult periods. They are an absolute tonic. There is no medication a doctor can prescribe, no operation they could undertake and no procedure they could do that would have the same life-affirming effect on someone going through emotional trauma.

In fact, they seem particularly effective precisely in those where there's little doctors can do medication-wise to ease someone's suffering, such as bereavement, for example.

I remember talking to one middle-aged woman whose 14-year-old son had died of cancer a few years previously. Her world had crumbled, she explained. She described it as feeling as if someone had scooped out her insides — she felt so utterly empty and hollow. She wanted to crawl into bed and never get up again. But she couldn't. She had two other children and they needed her. Just before her son died, they had bought him a dog. He had nudged her and her husband for years for one and, amazing times was precious and he didn't have long left, they gave in and got him one. While she'd never been interested in dogs and had never even remotely considered herself a dog person, now he was gone, it fell to her to take care of it. She explained how the dog made her get up each morning as he needed to be walked before the children got up. He forced her to get dressed, to structure her day. When the children were at school and she was home alone, if she wanted to cry, he didn't mind.

Paws for thought: Tilda Swinton and her dog Lewis pose for the Guide Dogs charity

He didn't judge her when she wanted to roll up on the sofa and instead would come and lie next to her. She said somehow he could sense her grief and knew she just needed someone there with her, silently but persistently keeping her company. 'The dog saved my life,' she told me.

NO QUALITY Street this Christmas? Needle has warned it has been hit by the supply chain crisis. But you can't have Christmas without Quality Street — gorging yourself until you feel sick and arguing over who keeps putting the wrappers back in the tin. Quality Street is Christmas in my head.

a hand for a stroke. Patients who had felt there was no hope and that life was empty and dark suddenly found a reason to laugh as they felt his cold nose pressed against them as they lay in bed.

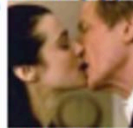

He'd sit out in the patient garden and pester people for walks. I credit that dog with doing as much for those patients as the staff did.

It's not just the mental health benefits. I've seen people who are so riddled with arthritis drag themselves up, day in and day out, to take their beloved dog for a walk. What's more, they do this without complaining or griping.

WHAT'S interesting is that I suspect if I told them to exercise, she'd scoff at me and think me mad. Yet, thanks to their dog, they actually do more exercise than many people half their age. And this is borne out by research. Studies show dogs have demonstrable health benefits: older dog owners are more than twice as likely to maintain their mobility than non-dog owners. They have lower blood pressure and rates of depression, better cholesterol levels and are also less likely to feel lonely. How often do we reach for the prescription pad when the answer is sitting in front of us — wearing a collar and wagging its tail?

Don't give age-gap love the kiss-off

SIR DAVID HARE has described actors kissing women 20 years their junior as 'disgusting'. Hang on a minute. Regardless of the fact this smacks of being rather hypocritical — his thriller Page Eight features that exact age gap between stars Bill Nighy and Rachel Watson (right) — he's this rather aged! What's wrong with two consenting adults kissing, regardless of the age gap? What's disgusting about it? Imagine if he'd said this about mixed-race couples or same-sex couples — there'd rightly be an outrage. His comments feed into the agedist, dirty-old-man trope. While racism, sexism and homophobia are shunned, agedism appears to be one of the last bastions of acceptable intolerance.

HAVE you ever tried to build a mind map? By answering five simple questions on the NHS website Every Mind Matters, you can create your own. Think of it as a tool kit of things specific to you that can help you feel happier, less anxious and more in control.

It's a public health initiative from the newly formed Office for Health Improvement and Disparities and it aims to pull together resources and help us think proactively about the small changes we can make to boost our wellbeing.

It comes on the back of research that shows nearly half of adults in England said their mental health was negatively impacted by the pandemic and more than a third did not know what to do to improve it. Why not give this a go?

THIS new health tid is something I can get behind — fans of frozen dates say that they taste like caramel. They can be eaten as a dessert or snack and are packed full of fibre as well as being high in vitamin B6, potassium, magnesium and copper. Celebrities pose with their dogs in series of stunning photographs

A renowned portrait photographer has created a series of stunning images of UK celebrities and their dogs to celebrate Guide Dogs' 90th anniversary.

The photos, which aim to shine a light on the charity and its A-list supporters, have been taken by Andy Gotts, who is famous for his portraits of Hollywood icons such as Paul Newman and George Clooney.

Andy volunteered his time to photograph celebs to celebrate the charity's anniversary.

Animal-loving stars among the photos are Simon Cowell, David Walliams, Tilda Swinton and Fiona Bruce.

To help launch the 2021 Guide Dogs Appeal to fund life-changing services for people with sight loss, the long list of famous faces posed with their dogs – and the results are stunning.

Simon Cowell, David Walliams, Tilda Swinton and Fiona Bruce were among the celebs who posed with their pooches to celebrate the charity's 90th anniversary and help launch the 2021 Guide Dogs Appeal to fund life-changing services for people with sight loss.

David Walliams, who was photographed with border terriers Bert and Ernie, said: "Guide Dogs is such an amazing charity and is one of the first charities you hear about as a child.

"My dogs mean everything to me so I can only imagine the incredible bond a person has with their guide dog.

"I'm delighted to celebrate the 90th anniversary of the first four guide dog partnerships and please get involved with the Guide Dogs Appeal, if you can, to help fund the next 90 years."

The UK's first guide dog partnership qualified in October 1931 – and at any one time the charity is responsible for 8,400 puppies and dogs.

Andy Gotts, who is famous for his portraits of Hollywood icons such as Paul Newman and George Clooney, volunteered his time to photograph the dog-loving celebs as part of a range of activities Guide Dogs is holding to celebrate its 90th anniversary.

Andy said: "Needless to say, for my career, sight is important, so I have always thought that helping a charity like Guide Dogs that supports people with a vision impairment is something I would love to do."

Other celebrities photographed include Eamonn Holmes, Sir Derek Jacobi, Jim Carter and Imelda Staunton, Beverley Knight, Dion Dublin, Russell Watson, Jason Watkins, James Martin, Martin Clunes, Chris Packham, Lee Mack, Nicky Campbell, Richard Arnold, Phil Daniels, Jess Impiazzi and Wendi Peters.

English actor Phil Daniels said: "My dog has been very important in my life. I lost my partner nine years ago to cancer when Chico was a young dog and he has been my companion ever since, and is 14 now and still going strong.

"He's a Spanish stray that needed looking after. I tell people he's a black Russell. Me and Chico think that's funny.

"I think the Guide Dogs charity do an amazing job raising awareness, funds and sponsorship getting the message across that we need more guide dogs.

Stars pose with their pooches to celebrate 90 years of Guide Dogs charity

CONNIE EVANS

OCTOBER 6, 2021

12pm: Celebrity photographer Andy Gotts is used to shooting famous faces, but he can now add their four-legged friends to his list of clients.

To celebrate the 90th anniversary of the Guide Dogs charity, Mr Gotts has snapped some of the country's favourite celebrities with their beloved dogs, including Fiona Bruce, Simon Cowell and David Walliams.

Newsreader and presenter Fiona Bruce poses alongside her Irish Terrier Molly, while actor Martin Clunes relaxes in his garden alongside his two terriers and two cocker spaniels.

David Walliams and Simon Cowell among the celebrities showing off their pets for the guide dog's 90th birthday appeal | Ent & Arts News

patrickbowman 4 days ago

Simon Cowell, David Walliams, and Tilda Swinton are one of the A-listers who show off their pets to celebrate the 90th anniversary of a charity guide dog.

Photographer Andy Gotts snapped foot features to shed light on the star's most loyal fans.

It comes when the charity launches its annual appeal. This year, for that age, the theme is "90".

"My dogs mean everything to me, so I can only imagine the incredible bond a person has with their guide dog."

We all love our dogs, and it seems even celebrities - from David Walliams, to Simon Cowell, Tilda Swinton, and Fiona Bruce - aren't immune to the joys of canine companionship.

In celebration of man's best friend, renowned portrait photographer Andy Gotts has teamed up with Guide Dogs to commemorate the charity's 90th anniversary today.

The series features the UK's brightest stars - along with their fluffiest friends.
